

Eighth Judicial District Court

For Immediate Release

Dec. 5, 2011

District Court Judges To Hold Class At Palo Verde High School Students To Get The Verdict On The Career Choice Of Serving On The Bench

High School Students will get the verdict on the career choice of serving on the bench from District Court judges on December 12 at 8 a.m. until 11 a.m. at Palo Verde High School at 333 Pavillion Center Dr. in the ROTC rooms.

The judges will share their knowledge and experience as part of Palo Verde High School's career week. Students will get the inside track, straight from those who rule on the law, about being a judge and dispensing justice.

"This is a great opportunity for our judges to serve as role models, reach out and educate students to positively influence their lives," said District Court Chief Judge Jennifer P. Togliatti. "It's important for our youth to learn how impactful the law is in society and in their lives, and to see what a fulfilling career serving on the bench can be."

Visiting classrooms is one of the many youth educational opportunities in which the District Court participates. The goal of the Eighth Judicial District Court is to continue to reach out and serve the community as a partner and ensure access to justice. Visit our website at www.clarkcountycourts.us to learn more about the programs offered by the court.

###