Eighth Judicial District Court Warns Public: Scammers Sending Fraudulent Jury Duty Summons

LAS VEGAS – The Eighth Judicial District Court is alerting the public to an expanding jury duty scam involving fraudulent notices. Scammers are mailing fake jury summons that closely resemble the official postcards used by the court. These scams may display a jury ID number, group number, and even include a counterfeit QR code intended to mislead recipients.

While the Eighth Judicial District Court does send legitimate jury summons by postcard, there are important differences to recognize. The scam postcards may contain incorrect information, such as reporting dates that do not align with court schedules (for example, listing a Saturday as the reporting date), unfamiliar phone numbers, or QR codes that lead to unofficial websites or request sensitive information.

The phone number listed on scam postcards may ring without answer or connect to a voicemail, prompting callers to leave a message.

How to Differentiate an Official Jury Summons from a Scam:

- Official jury postcards from the Eighth Judicial District Court will direct the recipient to a secure website to verify the authenticity of the summons.
- Official reporting dates will always fall on regular business days in accordance with court operations; scam postcards may list dates that do not align with court schedules, such as a Saturday.
- Official court contact information is included on legitimate postcards; scam notices may reference unfamiliar or suspicious phone numbers.
- Scam postcards may include a counterfeit QR code intended to mislead recipients.

If you receive a suspicious jury notice, do not respond, scan any QR codes, or provide any personal information.

To verify the validity of your summons, visit: clarkcountycourts.us/departments/jury-services.

Scroll down and click on “Complete Jury Questionnaire,” then click “Sign On” and enter your Juror ID and zip code.
